

Day Thirteen: Cambodia – Tomb Raider

Day 13 started at 9AM with a short ride to the temple where the Angelina Jolie movie “Lara Croft – Tomb Raider” was filmed in 2001. It was the perfect location. This temple was so overgrown with trees that they could not be removed without completely destroying the temple, so the authorities left the temple pretty much the way it was found. Amazing what 400 years of desertion can do to a place.

Next stop was another temple from Angkor and our final temple of the trip. Over 1000 years old.

After stopping at a local restaurant for traditional Cambodian food we went to our final stop for the day: a handicraft school where they teach the disabled and disadvantaged how to make handicrafts to sell so they can learn to support themselves.

"The Faces of Cambodia" by Wendy Longman Photography

